

In the Midwest,
the working poor
consume up to 26% more energy
per year than the average household.

Incentives for energy efficiency save hard
earned money
for working families.

Source: American Council for an Energy Efficient Economy