The Santee Community Farmers Market had a great ending to the year. We had eight different vendors this season. With food trucks, beadwork, fresh produce and homemade goods, each Saturday has been filled with a new combination of people and goods.

Vendors from the Farmers Market will attend the Holiday Market at Ohiya Casino on Nov. 5, 2016.
GARDENS
By Julene Kay

This is Tracey Campbell. She has been gardening for more than five years. This year, her primary crop was pumpkins. She also had tomatoes, watermelon, peppers and cucumbers.

Who says gardening can’t be fun? Laurie Hoffman, with her two daughters, Cecilia and Olivia, and their friends are spreading grass clippings. Lori’s soil is heavy clay and we’d like it to be better next year. We are trying to build it up with grass clippings and leaves.

WORKSHOPS
By April Goettle

We’ve had several very fun workshops in Santee within the last few months! In August, we had a foraging workshop, where folks searched along the waterfront park in Santee for wild, edible and medicinal foods. In September, we had a pasta sauce canning workshop with Kristine Flyinghawk.

Upcoming workshops include a fall pumpkin carving and cooking workshop on Oct. 28, and a fall garden turndown workshop. In this workshop, we will provide buffalo manure to gardeners to help their soil for the next growing season.

OUR FACEBOOK PAGE

Santee Community Foods Project Facebook page:
www.facebook.com/SanteeCommunityFoodsProject

CENTER for RURAL AFFAIRS NEBRASKA INDIAN COMMUNITY COLLEGE